Hard to Reach?- Engaging Diverse Communities

A course about engaging with diverse and excluded communities on climate change
and the environment

Wednesday 27 January 2010
and Tuesday 13 April 2010
10.00—16.30

Location NCVO, Regent's Wharf,
8 All Saints Street,
London N1 9RL

The course will help you to:

1. Gain a wider understanding of working with diverse communities and groups on climate change and environment
2. Assess and understand the demographics of an area and the implications of these figures for your work
3. Enhance your skills on engaging excluded organisations
4. Understand how relevant legislation and work on impact assessments affects and informs your work
5. Identify ways to get funding and resources for this work
6. Develop an engagement plan to work with diverse communities and groups

Who should attend this course?

Anyone who wants to work better with diverse communities and groups on environment and climate change.

So if you work (or volunteer) for a charity, local authority, central government, business or a local group and want to better engage with a wider group of people then this course will give you the skills and knowledge you need.

Facilitators:

Maria Adebawale, Director, Capacity Global, Chris Church, and David Bryan, Capacity Global Associates, have delivered training and advice on environment, climate change, diversity and equality to local authorities, charities, communities and government over twenty years.
